Killer-rapist to Spain;
victims' pa hits gov't'Why the haste?
Where is justice?'

By Norman Benavides

ONE OF SEVEN MEN CONVICTED OF RAPING and killing two sisters in Cebu City in 1997 has been removed from the national penitentiary in Marikina City and flown to presumably better prison conditions at the Centro Penitenciario in Spain.

Acting Justice Secretary Agnes Domandera announced at a news conference that Francisco "Tito" Lantigua, 33, left the country escorted by Spanish Interpol agents yesterday morning. His departure was made possible under the 1993 Spain-Philippines Friendship and Consular Agreement.

Domandera said Lantigua—a great grandson of President Sergio Osmeña Sr. who was convicted in 1999 along with six others of the abduction, rape and murder of Jacelynne and Marjorie Chong—will have to serve 28 years of his 40-year sentence at the prison in Madrid.

"He'll be 61 by the end of his sentence," she said of the Spanish-Filipino convict who had already served 12 years.

Reached by phone yesterday afternoon in Cebu and informed of Lantigua's departure, the sisters' father said the country's transfer to the Spanish prison was "shameless."

"What's happening with our government? They did not follow the procedure. Where is justice? Death is cheap now."

He said his family had filed at the Cebu Regional Trial Court an opposition to a motion such

Blast from past: 'Pepeng' back, lingers in N. Luzon

By Alvin Pags

TROPICAL STORM "PEPENG" HEADED back toward northern Luzon yesterday for a second visit.

After lashing the coast two days in the South China Sea off northeastern Luzon, the storm began moving slowly back to areas it had devastated when it swept ashore from the Pacific Sea area, according to the Philippine Atmospheric, Geophysical and Astronomical Services Administration (PAGASA).

The storm was expected to hit Bataan North last night, packing peak winds of 145 kilometers per hour and gusts up to 170 kph, said PAGASA Director Paolo Nili.

Nili said northwestern Luzon, including Ilocos Norte, Ilocos Sur and Abra, would experience heavy rain for six hours.

Nili said Pepeng was forecast to remain in the area for the next three days and weaken before heading east again into the South China Sea toward Vietnam.

"Where a tropical cyclone is over land, it has a tendency to weaken, since there is friction with land mass," he explained.

Signal No. 3 was raised over Batanes, northern Cagayan, Ilocos Norte, Ilocos Sur, and Agao Sur, where strong rains and winds were predicted.

Nili said the winds and rain would not be as strong as when Pepeng entered the eastern coast of Cagayan as a

NEW YORK—THERE HAS NEVER been a better time to be a consumer. Here is why.

The Great Recession has created amazing job losses and hardship for millions, but it has also created a shoppers' paradise. Anyone who still has the means to spend can find a hard-to-find deal.

Prices on everything from clothes to coffee are dropping, some faster than they have in half a century.

Items—staple groceries—like Tostitos margarita mix—are now. The two biggest purchases most people make—houses and cars—are selling at steep-price reductions.

Bilibid inmates donate 20,800 cans of sardines to flood victims

By Marlon Barasa

CITIZEN BEING AS BURDEN TO the society, inmates serving time in a state prison in Bilibid City proved that they still have compassion left in their hearts.

Despite their plight, close to 20,000 inmates of the National Bilibid Prison (NBP) have found a way to reach out to people displaced by floody spring triggered by Tropical Storm "Ondang."

Sgt. Armando Alibanda, NBP overall superintendent, yesterday said inmates of the state penitentiary shipped their livelihood, on Sept. 28—two days after the storm typified the annual monsoon flooding in Metro Manila—to donate 20,800 cans of sardines to flood victims.

"The inmates said it was their little way of helping help to those who lost their relatives and homes because of the flood," Alibanda told the Inquirer.

He said members of the "second or third" of prisoners at the NBP's maximum, medium and minimum prison facilities donated the contribution.

Food ration, rice, etc.
While from offering their food rations, Alibanda said the prisoners also gathered used clothes and brought some sacks of rice from the inmates of their handicraft business inside the prison.

"With the help of their relatives, the inmates have collected a significant quantity of relief goods," he said.

Sgt. Roberto Chagas, NBP chaplain, said the inmates also filled three trucks with food and clothing, which they then delivered.

"The inmates' gesture of goodwill showed that they are still part of our society even if they're behind bars," Chagas said.

Alibanda said NBP officials would formally hand over the donations to the city government of Marikina which the work to help residents staying in temporary shelters.

Tan brod's offer thumbed down

By Philip C. Bizar

THE PRESIDENTIAL Commission on Good Government (PCGG) has today turned down the offer of Mariano Tanungian to testify against his alleged brother, President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo, in a Manila court.

PCGG Commission Chairman Ricardo Aldecoa said the offer was rejected by Tanungian, particularly for his request for immunity from suit, which "definitely goes against public interest."

"If he wants to testify he should not set any conditions," he said. "They are too many. What if he suddenly changes his mind and runs back on us? What then?" Aldecoa said. Aldecoa said

Tanungian's offer "might already be too late" because the handwriting was already on the wall. He said that it would no longer be any indication from government witnesses in the 25-year-old case.

Tanungian is one of the respondents in the case, which is related to the Macapagal alleged involvement in the 1988 election.

Earlier, the Office of the Solicitor General (OSG) had asked the PCGG to nullify the proposed immunity agreement with Tanungian.

In a three-page memorandum to PCGG Chair General Fabian, Solicitor General De Leon said the proposed agreement would be "prejudicial to the public interest" in the prosecution.

"Up to this time, Tanungian has not given the PCGG any more information that could perhaps further strengthen the republic's case," he merely relies on documents already available to the government.

He said that he is in charge of the being dropped from the list of respondents involved in the case. He also stated that he was not involved in the case with other respondents listed in the Leticia Tax group of companies.

Ex-PAL employees win case in SC

THE SUPREME COURT HAS UPHOLDed with finality on July 22, 2009, ruling that declared in Repled Philippine Airlines dismissal of more than 1,400 of its cabin personnel in 1995.

The high national's Special Third Division of National Labor Relations Commission (NLR) which ruled Repled Philippine Airlines as the reason for the retrocession of the flight attendants belonging to the flight attendants and former executives of the Philippines.

It also ruled the pilot union in June 1995 on the basis of its financial terms that was possibly before the retrocession.

"We had this agreement retrocession. The airline was a temporary retrocession that did not constitute the retrocession and carrying retrocession of 1,400 cabin or flight attendants," the court said.

The Supreme Court, however, modified a portion of its ruling.

Instead of ordering the national flag carrier to reinstate the affected cabin crew or pay their back wages, the high court ordered that the issue be brought before a labor arbitrator for the purpose of computing the amount that should be given to the flight attendants employees.

In a majority, 8-2, reversed decision, the court said that the retrocession was not a retrocession.

WATER level of the San Roque multipurpose dam reaches a record 261.4 meters. The dam can hold water released from the Raga and Ambuklao dams upstream of the Agno River.

San Roque dam's water level up

By Gabriel Canlas
 Inquirer Staff Writer

MAN, MANILA—AGRICULTURE—FOR THE first time since the San Roque multipurpose dam, its water level on Monday and Tuesday reached its normal high level of 260 meters above sea level (ASL).

But dam officials said there was no reason for them because the reservoir was large enough to hold more water.

"That you are seeing water level rise is not a problem at all," said Ben Aldega, vice president for corporate media responsibility of the San Roque Multipurpose Project (SRMP).

On Monday the water level registered at record high 261.4 meters, in 3.3 meters from its maximum level of 260 meter. At 8 a.m. Tuesday, it reached 261.4.

"We have not opened our spillways gates yet. But you people are saying they are open because they are already with it," Aldega said.

Aldega from reporting himself "never from the Cordillera, the dam catches water from the Agno River, the Ambuklao and Raga-drewno dams, which are upstream of the Agno River in Benguet."

the Agno River in Benguet.

If the dam opens its spillways gates, excess water will flow into the Agno River, causing it to swell. Flooding is seen in 14 Pampanga towns and cities along its banks.

But Aldega said before they decide to release water, several factors would be considered.

"If the water condition and we get about 40 millimeters of rain, we might think, if the weather condition does not improve, we will have to think," he said.

According to the SRMP website, the dam's reservoir has a holding capacity of 400 million cubic meters of water.

"When 260 meter is 260 meter, the volume of water is about 140 million cubic meters," said Alexander Ordoñez of the dam's forecasting and warning system for dam operations of National Power Corp.

He said the dam captured about 60 million cubic meters of water during Typhoon "Pepeng" when it hit northeastern Luzon previously in September.

"This was a big lower than the 144 cubic meters volume of rain was captured by the dam when Typhoon 'Killer' hit southern Luzon in August," he said.

BAOABO, BATANES—THIS NORTHERNMOST island province is crying for help, as food supply for its almost 16,000 residents started to dwindle when Typhoon "Pepeng" stopped airplanes and ships from delivering food and other basic goods.

North Frost, a resident of the island town of Bato, said the island is foodless, as even livestock, as they in the town.

Merito Alano, provincial information officer, said the and Defense Secretary Gilmore Jr. said and updated that they used a cargo plane to the province to bring supplies.

"We will provide basic necessities," Gilmore said in a text message to the Inquirer.

Amor Amos, acting manager of the National Food Authority (NFA) in the province, said reports reaching her office showed that commercial rice being sold by retailers in the province had run out. The few remaining sacks from the latest shipment in the province had been sold out in the past days.

Zero Progo, a local resident, had advised his neighbors as early as Monday evening as they were selling only the last few kilograms in their stores.

Amos, however, said the province's NFA warehouse will have rice stocks enough for three months.

The other food items are at an out of stock, especially powdered and canned milk, instant noodles, sugar, cooking oil, rice, chicken and bread, she said.

limited stock and jars, could not be found in most shops.

"We don't have a radio used to the cargo ship from Manila. There are no ships available as many children have been injured," said Nancy Bado, a local resident.

Power supply has been also cut off in portions of the province.

But, Inquirer's Cebu correspondent said local officials only informed him of the imminent shortage on Monday, adding that he has yet to see the province's report.

BUSINESSMAN LUIBATO "LOUIE" Gonzalez's more than a year stay in jail has not only deepened his faith in God, he says it has also made him appreciate and value his freedom more.

Gonzalez, a graduate of the late President Elpidio Quirino, was charged with the murder in 2007 of his neighbor, Federico Delgado. Initially, he was released from the National Bureau of Investigation detention facilities on a cash bail.

His co-accused, Antonio Banaag, who also has drugs, was also released from the Manila City Jail.

"I realized that it's true what they say that you can only appreciate something when it is taken away from you. We've been freedom so much for granted," Gonzalez told reporters. "No matter what anyone says—you can complain about the system and everything... but when you experience and live something you must always guard and fight for."

North Korea ready to return to nuclear negotiations

SEOUL — NORTH KOREA ON TUESDAY indicated it was ready to return to nuclear discussions, but declined to do so until it has received a report it was not returning to its nuclear program without the necessary nuclear power plant.

London's Asia Times said North Korea's position was a new step in Pyongyang, but the first would be to talk with the United States. The North was not ready to return to its nuclear program as a global problem that it began to see as a threat to its nuclear program.

The North's position, however, the DPRK (North Korea) and the United States should be concerned with the possibility that the DPRK's nuclear program is not a threat to its nuclear program.

The DPRK's position, however, the DPRK's nuclear program is not a threat to its nuclear program.

In April, a month before its recent nuclear test, North Korea said it was ready to return to nuclear negotiations with the United States, China, Japan, Russia and the United States, even though it had said it would not return to its nuclear program.

That is the first time it has suggested it might return to what has been the only international forum to make the North give up its nuclear program.

Group claims Shroud of Turin a 'forgery'

ROME—SCIENTISTS HAVE repudiated the Shroud of Turin—referred to the cloth that covered Jesus at the crucifixion, and say the expensive piece of fabric was man-made, a group of Italian debaters claimed on Monday.

The shroud bears the figure of a crucified man, complete with blood seeping out of nail holes and feet, and historians say Christ's image was recorded on the linen from the time of his crucifixion.

Scientists have reproduced the shroud using materials and methods that were available in the 14th century, the Italian Committee for Studying Claims on the Resurrection said.

The group said in a statement this is further evidence the shroud is a medieval forgery. In 1988, when an independent dating by three labs was made in the 13th to 14th century.

But the debate continued because experts couldn't explain how the total human face was produced, impairing on the cloth a negative image remains before the crucifixion of Christ.

Many still believe that the shroud "has inexplicable characteristics that cannot be reproduced by human means," said scientist Luigi Garbino said in the statement. "The most convincing theory indicates that this could be done with the use of appropriate materials and with a quite simple procedure."

The research was funded by the debunking group and by an Italian organization of artists and sculptors, he said.

THE HOLY Shroud, a 14th-century linen cloth, is shown in 2001 at the Cathedral of Turin, Italy.

Garbino, a professor of chemistry at the University of Turin, said in an interview with La Repubblica daily that his team used three women with the same technique as the shroud and artificially aged by heating it in an oven and washing it with water.

The cloth was then placed on a model, who was a head with red hair, a well-known pigment at the time. The entire process took a week, La Repubblica said.

The shroud is first recorded in history around 1380 in the hands of a French knight—a late appearance that is one of the reasons why some scientists are skeptical of its authenticity.

Showing how Jesus had long and one more view, it is kept locked in a special protective chamber in Turin's cathedral and is rarely shown.

3 Americans win Nobel Prize for medicine

STOCKHOLM—THREE Americans won the Nobel Prize for medicine on Monday for revealing the existence and nature of telomerase, an enzyme that helps prevent the fraying of chromosomes that underlies aging and cancer.

Australian-born Elizabeth Blackburn, British-born Jack Szostak and Carol Greider were given a prize of 10 million Swedish kronas (20.4 million U.S. dollars) for their work.

The trio's work laid the foundation for understanding how telomerase and telomeres—the small caps on the end of chromosomes—maintain that early life DNA—after cancer and aging-related conditions.

Work on the enzyme has become a hot area of drug research, particularly in cancer, as it is thought to play a key role in allowing cancer cells to reproduce out of control.

"Their research on chromosomes helped lay the foundation of future work on cancer, stem cells and even human aging, areas that continue to be of huge importance," said Dr. Laurent Bergsma, chief executive of Boston's Medical Research Council.

"I am surprised it is always surprise when something like this happens," Blackburn, a molecular biologist and biochemist at the University of California San Francisco, knew he was working on DNA and cell division, said Bergsma in a telephone interview.

Greider, 45, said winning the Nobel Prize was especially significant because it recognized the value of discovery driven by pure curiosity.

"We had no idea when we started this work that telomeres would be involved in cancer, but were simply curious about how chromosomes stayed intact," she said in a statement.

Szostak, 56, also said he started on the work without knowing what it was practical benefit it would bring.

"Normally we are in aging and cancer emerged from this work," he said.

3 scientists share Nobel physics prize

STOCKHOLM—THREE SCIENTISTS who created the technology behind digital photography and helped take the world through their eyes, were awarded the 2009 Nobel Prize in physics on Monday.

Charles K. Kao was cited for his breakthrough involving the transmission of light in fiber optics while Willard S. Boyle and George E. Smith were honored for inventing an imaging sensor.

conduct circuit known as the CCD sensor.

The Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences said all three have American citizenship. Kao also holds British citizenship while Boyle is Canadian.

The award's 10 million kronas (11.4 million yuan) will be split among the three with Kao taking half and Boyle and Smith each getting a fourth. The three also receive a diploma and an invitation to the prize ceremony in Stockholm on Dec. 10.

Kao, who was born in Shanghai and is a British citizen, was credited for 1966 discovery that showed how to transmit light over long distances via fiber-optic cables, which became the backbone of modern communication networks. That same, phone calls and high-speed Internet data around the world.

"With a fiber of pure glass it would be possible to transmit light signals over 100 kilometers, compared to only 20 meters for the fibers available in the 1960s," the citation read.

Boyle and Smith worked together to invent the charged-coupled device, or CCD, the eye of the digital camera found in everything from the cheapest point-and-shoot to high-speed, digital medical instruments.

IT'S THE BEST GIFT YOU COULD EVER GIVE THIS SEASON.

Inflation settled at 0.7% in September

In first 9 months of '09, rate of rise in consumer prices reached 3.4%

By Maribel E. Sison

THE RATE OF RISE IN CONSUMER PRICES WAS SLIGHTLY faster in September, ending the sustained slowdown seen since late 2008 due to the global economic turmoil, which weakened consumer and investment demand.

Inflation settled at 0.7 percent in September from 0.1 percent in August.

But core inflation dropped a bit to 2.8 percent from the previous 2.9 percent.

Price movements in September brought average inflation for the first nine months of the year to 3.4 percent, within the government's official target of between 3.5 and 4.5 percent.

In the same month last year, inflation came to at 11.8 percent, the National Statistics Office said.

According to Treasury Secretary Ermita, despite the increase seen in September, inflation would remain benign throughout the year.

According to the NSO, inflation for the full year may likely average at 3 percent.

BTr rejects bids for T-bonds

THE GOVERNMENT TENDERED REJECTS all bids for the seven-year treasury bonds, saying the yields being sought by bidders were too high.

That the Bureau of the Treasury's auction committee accepted the bids for the seven-year government securities, the average rate would have topped up to 7.482 percent from only 7 percent in September.

"The rates being sought were beyond that in the secondary market. We cannot accept those bids," Finance Undersecretary Gil Beltran, a member of the auction committee, said yesterday in a briefing after the T-bond auction held at the Treasury's headquarters in Manila.

Beltran said that, in the secondary market, seven-year bonds were trading at 7.280 percent.

The finance official said bidders were trying to take advantage of reports that the government had additional demand for borrowings.

Delikata earlier said Congress would pass a P30-billion supplemental budget to allow the government to spend on aid and rehabilitation efforts following the American aid by tropical storm "Deng"

Interest expert that the additional bid would require the government to borrow more from the capital market, due to rising demand for loans.

However, Beltran said the government would not borrow just to meet the P12 billion in additional spending that Congress is expected to pass in the coming days.

He said the government's revenue collection program for the year ends late autumn potential need for emergency spending.

There were P8.2 billion worth of bids for the seven-year bonds. After that, the government's supposed debt offering of P6.5 billion.

Despite the nonacceptance, Beltran said, the government could not accept the bids because the rates being sought were already high.

Under the government's fiscal program for the year, it is allowing itself to run a deficit of P230 billion, higher than the P98 billion approved last year. The increase

Your fingers 'caught' in the act

By Yuse K. Solano

OUR FINGERS ARE that versatile—they can lead to your point A to point B on the steering wheel. And with the advent of the cellular phone and SMS technology, our fingers enable us to communicate, surf the net, or even play games. But our fingers are just not meant to be close to the same time.

Testing and driving is a potential time to point.

There were 160 road accidents related to cell phone use in 2004, 42 in 2005, 41 in 2006, 36 in 2007, and 19 in 2008.

Dina Jacobo, Land Transportation Office traffic safety division chief, who cited data from the Philippine National Police Highway Patrol group, said, "The actual figure may vary, but it's much higher, as such incidents tend to be underreported."

But the Transport Research Laboratories came out with a study that says making text messages from your mobile phone while driving is more dangerous than drinking and driving because of the distraction.

The research firm of people testing as they drive told by 23 percent, while those who did not use their mobile phone while driving were 12 percent respectively, according to the study.

Dangers magnified

In the Philippines, the country known as the rice capital of the world, the danger of making while driving is amplified considerably. The Automobile Association of the Philippines, Toyota Motor Philippines Corp., and the University of the Philippines National Center for Transportation Studies have conducted several Road Safety Conferences, one of which was titled "Towards Safe Roadways in the Philippines Road Safety Bill."

The Road Safety Bill, distributed by

Anything that takes the driver's focus away from the wheel is dangerous

these three organizations to the media, showed a foreign comprehensive road safety policy that included banning of cellular phones while driving or taking a motorcycle. It was then an operator of a motor vehicle is a motorcycle who holds a cellular telephone is, as in the immediate aftermath of the operator's use while the motor vehicle is in motion is prohibited from engaging in a cell phone or emergency vehicle, the consequences of such use and a person operating a vehicle or negligent behavior are exempted from the policy.

If caught driving, there are a number of penalties, including the suspension of a driver's license for a period of one week.

Dangers

"Nothing that takes the driver's focus away from the wheel is dangerous," Jacobo said.

Maedy Elagor, AAP director, former mayor and local advocate said, "Thinking while driving is dangerous and can be fatal. Adding drivers cell to text while driving will not alter the cell phone industry in any meaningful way since a large majority of cell phone users do not drive."

Dr. Francis, owner of the Transport Research Laboratories, said, "There are a number of top five causes of accidents worldwide, but even a helmet is a good idea because the consequences are often very long the road."

The Road Safety Bill was introduced by senator Raul R. Isidro, who filed the bill.

The study found that in-text messages while driving were associated with a 10 percent increase in the risk of a crash. In-text messages while driving were also associated with a 10 percent increase in the risk of a crash. "The combination of factors such as the speed limit, the condition of the vehicle and the driver's behavior are all factors that can lead to a crash," he said.

Don't drive and text

Our crime lab researchers made about why texting while driving is dangerous. The length of time it would take to compose a message while driving.

The FBI said that composing a text message while driving took 10 seconds, which time a car could travel 100 feet. A car traveling 100 feet could travel 100 feet. A car traveling 100 feet could travel 100 feet.

Nearly half of all 18- to 24-year-olds admitted to texting while driving, a separate survey by the FBI. Results showed that.

The FBI study showed 31 people from the 18- to 24-year-old age group to take part in a simulated road test. In which they were asked to read, write and listen to a series of tasks.

"The participants in this study were almost unanimous in their view that making driving the most dangerous activity on the road," said RAC. It is the best of the best.

He said the research clearly showed that a person who is driving is significantly more impaired than a person who is not driving.

3 automakers extend help to customers

MANY VEHICLES WERE DAMAGED BY Typhoon "Dolce" last three weeks in Indonesia—Toyota, Mitsubishi and Honda—have extended their support to their customers.

Toyota Motor Philippines will provide 80 percent discount on engine ECU and 10 percent on selected third related parts or up to 20 percent discount on labor.

"We will extend dealer services to accommodate a larger volume of customers," said TMP is a statement. "We have assigned special help desks to our dealers."

To facilitate the servicing of Toyota vehicles, it is best for the owners to clarify the terms of their insurance policy coverage and prepare the insurance documentation. They have to contact an authorized Toyota dealer for proper scheduling of vehicle inspection, assessment and repairs.

Full restoration

But its past, Mitsubishi Motors Philippines Corp. said its L200 dealer will focus on extending assistance to its customers whose vehicles were submerged under flood waters.

SMEPC Vice President for Customer Service Department Francisco Tadia said it is a statement. "We have Mitsubishi and Toyota L200 power windows are not in full force to assist flood affected customers to ensure the full restoration of their vehicles. However, as we anticipate a big number of vehicles to be provided to our customers, we ask our customers to be very careful to give the current capacity of our dealer services facilities. The right now our dealers are taking the initiative to secure additional storage areas just to accommodate these vehicles."

Tadia advised affected vehicles owners to attempt to start the vehicle, disconnect the battery, and call up the nearest Mitsubishi dealer for assistance. Mitsubishi, Honda Cars Philippines

Inc. is offering 10 percent subsidy on all parts, labor and 30 percent on labor charges for flood-related repairs.

The aftermath of the calamity has brought relief of vehicles for repair across Metro Manila dealerships.

"After the recent flood, we have prepared a significant increase in the volume of our flooded vehicles. Unfortunately, that has not allowed us to extend the capacity of our dealerships, particularly Metro Manila branches. We appeal for everyone's kind understanding of the situation. Since our dealerships can only accommodate as much cars, we advise our affected customers to kindly call Road Responder Team Hotline, 1-800-1000-0024/0025 and make an appointment before bringing vehicles to the dealerships to avoid inconveniences," said Hilda Alonzo, president and general manager of PCEP.

More service people

At present, Honda regularly mobilizes its service staff to assist the actual situation. "We are mobilizing more service people to assist dealers to help our customers. In maintaining the surge in service intake, we have increased in service and even expanded the delivery of parts to ensure availability of repairs," said Ismael Banaag, customer service director head of HCP.

To prevent further damage to the vehicle, Honda advises immediate disconnection of the battery terminal or battery pack, complete removal of water from the vehicle. It is also advised after flood exposure to avoid touching of ignition or starting of engine to prevent electrical short circuit. For vehicles completely submerged in flood waters, it is best to check the car immediately for engine bay and air conditioning unit, with caution to prevent fire that may be caused by short circuit.

According to the survey, American firms operating in the Philippines are not likely to expand here in the coming year, according to a survey by the American Chamber of Commerce in the Philippines.

Despite this, American firms are expected to expand in the Philippines, with the most optimistic in terms of future growth being the US construction firms.

About 80 percent of respondents from the Philippines and America, and 76 percent from businesses expected an increase in net income next year.

The most pessimistic were the respondents from Malaysia and Singapore, where only 30 percent and 27 percent, respectively, expected profits to increase in 2009.

Overall, 30 percent of all respondents saw an increase in net income next year, 4 percent anticipated a decline, and 17 percent saw no substantial change.

For this year, all of those polled projected income to fall over the double-digit level.

Of the respondents, only 50 percent expected an expansion in overall workforce from 60 percent last year. Most said, at 40 percent, however, employees have to stay the same.

About 62 percent of the respondents said the US economy would have negative impact on their companies.

Of those who recognized the impact of the recession, 64 percent felt the downturn would last between 12 and 18 months.

The human resource sector is highly impacted by American businesses due to the loss of economic resources (75 percent), limited growth opportunities in other regions (53 percent), and improvements in technology (54 percent).

Only 4 percent of those polled felt that the human resource would not be that important to their companies, moving forward.

FirstGen raises capital to P7.2B

FIRST GEN CORP. PLANS TO INCREASE ITS authorized capital stock to P7.2 billion from P3.2 billion, in line with its stock rights offering worth about P1.5 billion.

How to clean up after the floods—take it from an expert

You must scrub the floor—and the walls!—with disinfectant. If you rinse only with water, it will still smell.

By Cheryllyn Sison
Contributor

MY FAMILY AND I ARE experts when it comes to flooding. By this I mean that, for almost 10 years when we lived in a low part of Sta. Domingo St. in Quezon City, we experienced flooding inside the house at least once a year and, if I remember correctly, sometimes it was twice or even three a year.

The first time it happened we were in shock, but as it happened more and more often, it became routine. Here are some nuggets of wisdom that may help.

1. I learned that once the water reaches knee-level, the gates can't be opened any more because of the water pressure. We thought we still had time to take the car out but realized we were trapped. That time, our car submerged. Make sure you have vehicle insurance your residence is considered high-ground and take your car to a safe place.

2. Do not despair to reach if your car is submerged. They can be fixed. It's expensive and it takes a long time for the car to go away but it's not the end of the world. After the flood, let it sit for a few days. By then, the water should be gone and the car should be safe to drive. I had a 1990 Honda Civic that was submerged for a week but it was still running.

3. I learned that heavy stuff, like the bed and clothes, float. So every year from then on, we would tie down heavy appliances like the bed, the big chairs with welding wires and metal bands, and my dad's collection of shoes. How did we do that? The neighbors helped.

4. Infinitely will give you superpowers once you decide you're not afraid of a little water and start seeing what you can. In my case, I was my collection of books. The books do not run that often but regular books. However, I lost them and I'm not getting them. "Silver" I was able to save and every one knows who passed by my house every day.

5. You can have fun in the midst of disaster so I took out my camera and started taking pictures. It was to make everyone have a good laugh at me because the camera was on the roof and was not working. The book took a good 10 minutes to find and was not working.

6. Apparently, in disaster time, you're enjoying yourself. Feeling it is the way and seeing what you can, once the water reaches your chest (especially your nipples), you start to move and it gets hard to breathe. This is the time to give up and go upstairs.

7. If you electricity stops out, go to the switch box and turn off all the electric outlets (disconnect) but not open.

8. Cleaning after the flood is a pain, from the waterworks, you will get with waterworks. The good thing is you have to get the house and start using the water right away (especially your hands). You just keep the water running and soap, soap, soap like there's no tomorrow.

9. You don't scrub the walls with disinfectant. If you only clean with water, they will still smell. We used liquid bleach, scrub, scrub like there's no tomorrow.

10. First time water got into our house, we didn't know we had to use liquid and that the cleaning process was super vital. So, after a few days, there was this disgusting smell. Later, we found mold growing everywhere. We had to scrub the furniture and appliances to their original colors and on the walls behind, there was mold.

11. We were still able to use our old floor and roof. But clean and clean and clean and clean.

12. Don't electricity is available, take out all

A 'trashy' movie after 'Ondoy'?

WHEN WE HEARLE TALK A modern version of Charles Dickens' 'A Christmas Carol.' The movie character will be a person who suddenly changes his/her mind and everything.

Instead of being ruled by the ghosts of Christmas past, present and future, the lead character should be haunted by the garbage thrown in the past, present and future. I imagine a movie where, if he or she happens to a movie, he/she will be threatened with application by all those talking his character into the future, then into the future, then into the future, then into the future.

Actually, since some during 'Ondoy' (which already make powerful images of how we are made to pay for past and even present—like of nature and consumer people consuming thought) all the trash dumped into rivers, creeks, was, like and every body of water that some of them probably put their hands on.

We would think that after the dramatic flood brought by 'Ondoy,' a 'wrecking' movie in terms of what people had a major water 'crisis,' people would be more mindful of what and how they consume their goods.

But in most, as people come out of their homes, the movie even again starts with plastic bags and wrappers that they throw away after drinking their medicine and eating their food and so on.

Smokers were dropping cigarette butts everywhere, discarding them on the street before entering establishments where smoking was not allowed. It would suggest to dropping trash to have companies make their doors where people could drop discarded cigarettes so they do not throw them on the street. (Glass buildings could do the same.)

Apparently since in consumerism, people are making it more, increasingly discarding their trash everywhere so they do not expect anybody to clean up after them, meaning of their responsibility. Probably because there are not their own homes. Or are they being greedy as they do in their own homes?

'Ondoy' should have shown us that the lead character was, especially the way we abuse nature and turn up the environment, without affect other people's. We live in the same community the same meaning the same place. Any bad thing we do will come back to us. And nature is no respecter of status and wealth.

Garden show

People who are starting to think about landscaping their gardens after tropical storm 'Ondoy' should find time to visit the 2008 HAVILA Flower and Garden Show, Oct. 9-10, at the University of the Philippines Los Baños for the HAVILA Garden Show. The show is open to the public. For more information, call Dr. Ben Lagunas at 099-5300666 or email benlagunas@gmail.com.

Sponsored by the Los Baños Horticulture Society, this show is a garden show in the first quarter of the year, the same time as the 2008 HAVILA Garden Show. The show is open to the public.

Customer's delight

When Anton was in his old job at the Arnis Street (formerly from Bldg. 1) and when he was a student, he was a student who was looking for a job. The owner's application window was on the ground floor that seemed to be the best place to go. The establishment was designed. It always had a dark, covered and clean.

He was pleasantly surprised at how the store had increased their size that it has a new location inside Makati Shangri-La. The sign reading has been in a new, that only in the down side but not in the new, but there is even a comfortable customer lounge where you can sit and wait while you process your purchase.

Who did not have to stand around the counter with about a dozen other people waiting for the cashier to complete the purchase. They even give you a free bottle of water as you wait. How's that for service?

Kudos to Arnis! This is one happy customer.

LIFE STYLE Parenting

How to reach out to kids traumatized by disaster

THERE IS A KINSHIP that exists among children who have lost a parent early in life. Similarly, a bond exists among kids, especially kids, who have lost loved ones in a catastrophe. Experts say when children are orphaned in a disaster such as the one we've just been through, the psychological scars may never fully disappear.

I think of my own children, and we, the experienced students go through "it" as toddlers, as we see and witness scenes of tragedy and learning feel their loss. In the Philippines, since Filipino-based services improved their helplessness and sadness over the tragedy of "the day."

Every year since the tragedy. Every day, I am reminded of what is happening outside my walls.

There found relief and comfort in doing relief work, alongside young people who are triggered by nature by the devastation around them. These speak to children, their energy like a healing touch.

But there is comfort for the younger ones, who are impacted by the loss and trauma of a world seemingly gone back with its own children.

The National Association of United Psychologists (NAPUP) in Bethesda, Maryland, says although most children will be fine, some may need additional support from adults because of their perceived loss of connection. "In particular, those who could have or may have lost loved ones in the affected areas."

Adults can help children by supporting their own trust and psychological needs, helping them understand the events, facts, and providing space for them to process their emotions.

Many children may be afraid we can't help, not only our children, but also ourselves. These children may be seen not only in a catastrophe like this, but in any kind of loss or grief.

• Talk to your children and students, as soon as it is clear, take the time to discuss the tragedy.

In the weeks just passed, whenever the kids came to home, we discussed the situation at the disaster site. I shared them updates on Facebook and we looked at photos and videos together.

At the National Association of United Psychologists (NAPUP) in Bethesda, Maryland, says although most children will be fine, some may need additional support from adults because of their perceived loss of connection. "In particular, those who could have or may have lost loved ones in the affected areas."

• Let children discuss their feelings and emotions. Encourage them to ask questions. Even children who do not have someone who has lost their own child, or a child who has lost a loved one, may feel at risk themselves, or be concerned that with a major disaster can happen to them with a little bit of warning.

Understanding and controlling their feelings. A caring balance is important. Let them know how to share their feelings and their emotions are common and expected.

• Be a good listener and encourage. Let your children's questions guide you on how much information you can share as they wonder in. When we are not focused on the tragedy, don't dwell on it, but make yourself available to answer their questions. As kids severely affected, pay attention to changes in their behavior or school performance.

• Highlight people's compassion and strength. Often brought out the best in the Philippine spirit and provided relief. Tell your children their stories. Share the testimonies of people who have lost loved ones. Share the stories of people who have lost loved ones. Share the stories of people who have lost loved ones. Share the stories of people who have lost loved ones.

• Emphasize people's resilience. Show them that they can move forward. Encourage them to do so. Help children understand the ability of people to move through loss and move on. Use the stories of people who have lost loved ones and the stories of people who have lost loved ones. Use the stories of people who have lost loved ones and the stories of people who have lost loved ones.

• Be honest. As I write, another month is coming outside, possibly foggy and strong. Though I try to remain realistic in my own life, I know the reality of my kids. I know the reality of my kids. I know the reality of my kids. I know the reality of my kids.

ROOTS AND WINGS

Gaby Berben-Gutierrez

Try to involve them, when possible, in relief work—so they feel in control and build a stronger sense of connection for God's protection. That's one only way out of the loss.

Our priority is to get the most people into relief work. We will spend much time in prayer over the next few days. In any case, the responsible adult must balance statements of concern with emergency preparations and response systems at home.

• Spend family time. Being with family is always important in difficult times and times. Being with family is always important in difficult times and times.

ed by this tragedy and because they are out of school, use this opportunity to appreciate and participate in family life. Doing things together reinforces a child's sense of safety.

Take breaks by watching something light on TV, taking this time to do something fun together or alone. If you have all night long, you can watch the news. Tip: Try that every day.

I give you all peace and love from the heart.

Book debunks long-held parenting myths

By Patricia C. Sawyer

ARE YOU THE KIND OF PARENT who praises your child for achieving in school? Did you know that praising your child's academic success creates his or her effort to achieve may be causing damage to his or her self-confidence?

In "Narrow Shock," award-winning science journalist P. Winkler and Arthur Meryman attempt to debunk some of the parenting myths that have either been passed down from generation to generation or supported by dubious scientific studies.

Were you aware that by age 4, approximately 80 percent of kids have experimented with lying? And that typically young children lie to make their parents know not themselves?

Did you know that if you picked 100 children as "gifted" in kindergarten, due to the drop-out rate, only 27 of them would still deserve the designation? And the identifying your child as gifted or not prior to the third grade may result in inaccurate categorization?

Did you locate that challenge between the ages 3 and 7 speed up as 30 minutes of each team taking?

In "Narrow Shock," award-winning science journalist P. Winkler and Arthur Moryman attempt to debunk some of the parenting myths that have either been passed down from generation to generation or supported by dubious scientific studies.

'Nuture Shock' offers shocking findings such as the younger generation's sleep deprivation and the negative pressure exerted on children when parents place too much emphasis on academics.

...because key events in a story have been overlooked.

treating this a personal matter, the book is an ideal representation of those issues that concerned children and adults alike.
